Clinic: Pro-choice tide swelling

By Jason Moody
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — Illinois lawmakers abandoned both their party and their previously held positions in a controversial abortion vote Wednesday. It was the first federal "litmus test" on the issue since the U.S. Supreme Court's landmark decision in July.

While the majority of Democrats nationwide voted in favor of a measure to permit the use of federal funds for abortions in the case of incest or rape, most party members from Illinois voted against it.

Meanwhile, two of the delegation's Republicans approved the move, which narrowly passed 216-to-205.

Although House members on both sides of the issue described the vote as a sign of the changing political climate brought on by the Court's decision weakening women's right to an abortion, the voting patterns of the Illinois delegation seemed to defy this trend.

Allison Hile, speaking for Granite City's Hope Clinic for Women, which performs abortions, said Wednesday's vote was an indication of the "pro-choice majority" which was activated after the court's ruling in Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services, a Missouri case which gave states new latitude to restrict abortions.

"Legislators are finally aware of the great majority of pro-choice voters," Hile said. "They did not speak out prior to the Webster decision because they didn't feel it was necessary. That has changed."

Hile said the Hope Clinic accepts approximately one rape victim a week and, if the House measure becomes law, the clinic will "gladly accept" patients who seek funding through the government's Medicaid program.

In all, seven of the 14 Illinois Democrats, including Reps. Jerry Costello, D-Bellefonte, and Glen Poshard, D-Carverville, voted against the abortion bill, as did six of the state's eight Republicans. One Illinois representative, Dick Durbin, D-Springfield, joined 55 members nationwide who flipped from their vote on the issue just one year ago and this time supported the federally financed abortion provision.

Durbin said he switched positions for personal reasons and his latest vote had nothing to do with the changing political times generated by the court's recent decision.

"I felt uncomfortable with my vote last year," said Durbin. "I am against abortion, but I am not a purist. I believe that rape and incest exceptions are reasonable."

Since 1981 the law has prohibited federal funds from being used for abortion unless a woman's life is in danger. House members have voted to uphold it every year since then.

The vote would allow low-income women who are victims of rape or incest to obtain assistance from the Medicaid program for an abortion.

Library fees tick parents

By Meg Tobo
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Parents at District 9's elementary schools are incensed over the Granite City Public Library Board's decision to charge children who live outside the city limits for their use of the library bookmobile.

Citing a new interpretation of a 1986 state statute regulating library use by non-residents, the board told parents that those who live outside the city limits must pay a $43 a year user fee or their children will no longer be allowed to visit the bookmobile when it comes to their school. The same fee will also apply to any non-resident wishing to use the main or branch libraries in Granite.

"We've got a class full of kids, and the ones who live in Granite go to the bookmobile, and the ones who can't afford the fee sit in the classroom and don't get any books. That's just not fair," said one parent.

Library board President Marshall Schroeder said the policy is not the board's, but is a state law that must be complied with.

"Our hands are tied as far as the non-resident fee. However, the philosophy of the library board is that we definitely want to (serve) all elementary school kids," Schroeder said.

Several members of the library board are scheduled to meet with District 9 Superintendent Gilbert "Gib" Walmsley this week to work on a solution.

"What we'd like to look at is maybe selling some sort of service contract to the school district, where we could continue to serve all the kids and still be in compliance with the law as far as being paid for service to non-residents," said Haig Nighossian, one of the library board members who will meet with Walmsley.

Mathias earns chamber award

By Dennis Grubaugh
Managing editor

EDWARDSVILLE — Carl Mathias, one of the region's best-known individuals, got his time in the spotlight Thursday night by earning the coveted Community Achievement award of the Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce.

The award came during the chamber's annual dinner at Sunset Hills Country Club.

Community Pride Committee Chairman Mary Brown presented the honor, saying Mathias was "probably known by everyone in this room, all of Illinois and likewise all of the St. Louis area."

Brown added: "If he's not known personally, certainly the work he has done is known, for he has been instrumental in almost every economic development that has occurred or is occurring in our area."

Mathias shunned the podium, preferring a quick "thank you" rather than a long speech. He received a standing ovation from the audience of approximately 250 persons.

A longtime resident of Granite City, Mathias is a retired Illinois Power Co. executive. He is a past president of the chamber, Granite City Rotary and Cahokia Mound Boy Scout Council.

He has served on the advisory board of St. Elizabeth Medical Center and as a board member of Junior Achievement of Mississippi Valley.

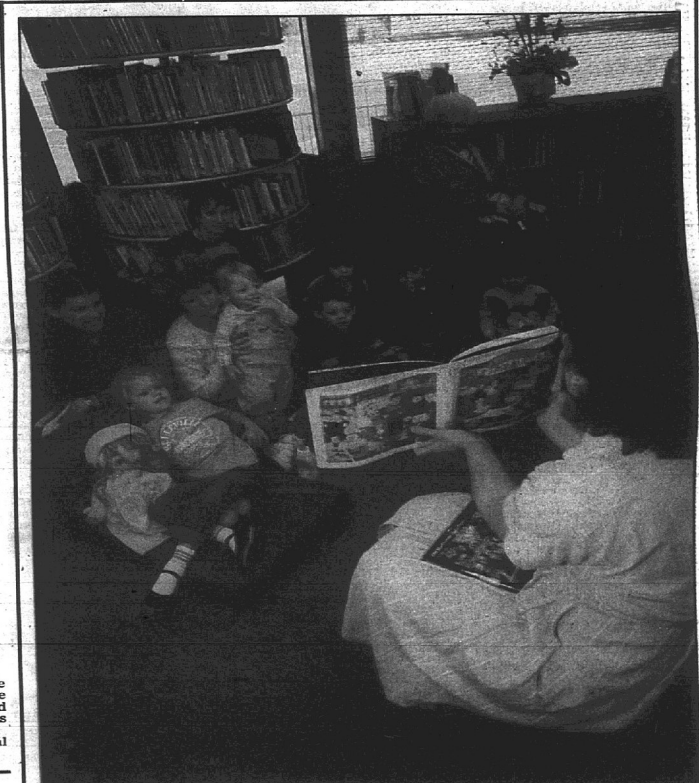

Mathias helped form the present Tri-City Regional Port District and in 1984 helped create the Leadership Council of Southwestern Illinois, a group that has fostered recent economic growth in the area.

He has served as a board member of the Regional Commerce and Growth Association based in St. Louis and serves on the board of the Bi-State Development Agency, of which he is a past chairman. He is also chairing the Scott Air Base Joint-Use Task Force.

Chamber officers were also seated at the event, Ron Daine taking over the presidency from Joe Hassler.

Guest speaker was Thomas Tallarico, publisher of the St. Louis Sun.

More information on the chamber event can be found in this Thursday's Press-Record.

IT'S STORYTIME! Rapt attention is given to Mary Agnes Schlatter, children's librarian, last week during story hour at the Granite City Branch Library on Johnson Road. Story hours are held each week at 10:30 a.m. on Wednesdays at the main library at 20th Street and Delmar Avenue and on Thursdays at the branch facility.

Korte granted port contract

By Andy Stirling
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — In order to save $250,000, the Tri-City Regional Port District Thursday bypassed normal rules requiring it to ask for public bids on construction projects.

The action came after the lowest bid on a new Foreign Trade Zone warehouse to be constructed at the port was $250,000 lower than the next lowest bid. But the low bid was conditioned on the company being allowed to start work by Oct. 16.

Korte Construction Co. of Highland won the contract on its bid of $2,623,000.

For Korte to start work by Oct. 16, the port board had to first have seven utility poles and some underground wiring relocated away from the site. The board passed a resolution allowing Port Director Bob Wydra and District Engineer Jerry Lavelle to seek oral bids for that work.

Lavelle said Friday afternoon that he was still awaiting a third bid on moving the poles and wiring.

The warehouse project is being financed by part of a $2.5 million bond issue for port improvements, details of which are nearly complete, Wydra told the board.

Village zoning hearing Oct. 26

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

PONTOON BEACH — A controversial Zoning Board of Appeals decision on property just north of the Arlington Heights area will be the subject of a public hearing at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 26, at the Village Hall, 3910 Illinois 111.

At issue are the results of a public hearing held Aug. 19 by the zoning board on a petition to rezone 70 acres of land sought by Charles Luchmann of Fairway Estates.

By unanimous vote, the Zoning Board of Appeals recommended changing the zoning from business to single-family residential for 70 acres of village land, near Kelly Drive in Arlington Heights. Petitions from nearby residents opposing the zoning change were presented to the Village Board of Trustees at its Sept. 12 meeting.

No decision was reached at that meeting, despite a 75-minute executive session during which

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

Briefly

Blood drive here Oct. 19

Church Women United will sponsor its annual blood drive for the American Red Cross on Thursday, Oct. 19, according to Helen Todoroff, chairman of the event.

The drive will be from 2 to 7 p.m. at the fellowship hall of St. John United Church of Christ, 2901 Nameoki Road.

No appointments are necessary to donate blood.

The Red Cross is reminding people there is no risk of contracting any diseases in the process of donating blood, as the needle and other equipment used are disposable.

Lee Park closes until 1990

VENICE — Organized activities at Lee Park are over and the park is closed to the public until next spring, Charles Collins, park supervisor, announced Thursday.

"We want to thank the public for coming out during the spring and summer months and enjoying the facilities at the park. We are looking forward to seeing everyone again when the park reopens in the spring of 1990," Collins said.

The park official said the swings, picnic tables, volleyball and tennis equipment, along with other items, are to be removed and stored during this weekend.

"We are already making plans for next year, when we hope to recruit volunteer workers to help us keep the park clean," Collins said.

Blood drives at GC Steel

Granite City Steel will be holding three separate blood drives over a two-day period. On Tuesday, Oct. 17, a drive will be held in the Works Office cafeteria, 20th Street and Madison Avenue, and will run from 8 a.m. until 1 p.m.

On Wednesday, Oct. 18, a drive will be held at the Blast Furnace on Illinois 203 and will run from 8 a.m. until 1 p.m. Also that day, a drive will be held in the General Office cafeteria, 20th and State streets, from noon until 5 p.m.

To be eligible to donate, an individual must be 17 or older and weigh at least 110 pounds.

Earth Day to be topic

The Earth Day 1990 group will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 18, at St. John's United Methodist Church across from the Madison County Courthouse in Edwardsville.

The public is invited to learn about environmental projects at the meeting. These environmental events will culminate in an international environmental festival in April 1990.

Commemorative wall at school

A "commemorative wall" at the north entrance of the Goshen Lounge in the University Center of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville will be displayed Oct. 16-20 for those whose lives have been affected in any way by alcohol or drug abuse.

The wall, consisting of three panels decorated with a rainbow, will be part of National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week at SIUE.

Anyone may attach notes or photographs, leave mementos or visit the wall to discover that others have suffered with problems related to alcohol or drug abuse, a spokesman said.

Pony Express is theme

The Stewardship Committee for the Nameoki Presbyterian Church, 1700 Pontoon Road, has adopted the concept of the Pony Express.

Under the leadership of Ray Hankins and the pastor, the Rev. Vicki L. Harden-Evans, the membership and friends of the congregation will pass six saddlebags from family to family in the style of the original Pony Express, as part of a giving program.

It is the intention of the Stewardship Committee that, instead of pledging, those responding will help the Nameoki Presbyterian Church be able to establish a good working budget for the coming year, Harden-Evans said.

The church program begins today.

Costello to conduct meetings

In a continuing effort to receive input from constituents in the 21st Congressional District, U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, will hold 10 "town hall" meetings this fall.

Costello, who has held 54 town meetings since going to Congress in August 1986, said the meetings are an opportunity to discuss issues face-to-face with residents of southwestern Illinois.

"Town meetings are an effective way for me to keep in touch with the people I represent in Washington, D.C.," Costello said.

"These gatherings are informal, informative, and a way for me to listen to the concerns of the residents of this area."

Below is a list of Costello's fall town meetings:

Among the Corps exhibits will be a 360-degree (wrap around) scale drawing depicting the Mississippi River from Minnesota to New Orleans, with major tributaries and cities highlighted.

Also featured will be a time line listing important dates and events in Corps history, a slide program following the path leading from the formation of the Corps to its role in recreation and water resource management, and a six-foot scale model of a catfish.

Park rangers from St. Louis Engineer District lakes will staff the exhibits, which will be on display at the following times and locations: Oct. 17-23, Alton; Oct. 25-27, St. Louis; Oct. 28-31, Grafton; Nov. 1-3, Hardin; and Nov. 4-6, Meredosia.

Weber's music to come to Fox

Tickets go on sale Monday for a Broadway-style concert, "Music of Andrew Lloyd Weber," which will be at the Fox Theater from Nov. 28 through Dec. 3. Prices range from $15.50 to $37.50, depending on performance and seat location.

Music from Weber's hit shows, including "Phantom of the Opera," "Cats" and "Starlight Express," will be performed by a 35-member orchestra and 15 singers. The cast features such actors and actresses from Weber's shows, including Robert Michael Baker who was the original Che in "Evita."

Those who wish more information about the Fox show should call MetroTix at (314) 534-1111. Tickets will be available at the Fox box office or Schnucks video centers.

Heart Strings, another musical revue, will be at the Fox at 8 p.m. Oct. 24. It has a humanitarian purpose.

The ensemble show featuring singers from across the country is touring 30 U.S. cities and organizers hope to raise $4 million to fund care services for people with AIDS and fund education to prevent the disease.

Tickets are $25 for the show, $75 for show and champagne reception following, $150 for the show and dinner. The bar will shut off its beer taps and only soft drinks will be available. St. Louis band Broken Toys will perform.

Don't forget that a rock show for young people, sponsored by KidsPlace: St. Louis, will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Oct. 27 at First Rock on Laclede's Landing. The bar will shut off its beer taps and only soft drinks will be available. St. Louis band Broken Toys will perform.

Tickets are $5.

Debbie Reinhardt covers the local concert scene for the Journal.

Wanted: Stand-in for White Castle

The White Castle hamburger chain in St. Louis has shown no interest in cooperating in the shooting of the film "White Palace" that begins Oct. 25 in St. Louis, according to the film's production crew.

In lieu of a White Castle, the "White Palace" production people are on the lookout for a similar style restaurant that they can remodel to resemble the real thing.

The script is about a married man from west St. Louis County who falls in love with a young lady who works at a "White Palace." White Castle officials, who refused to comment on the matter, apparently are a bit conservative when it comes to stories about their employees being locked into romantic trangles with customers.

The Fox Theater rejected Frank Sinatra when he toured last year with pals Sammy Davis Jr. and Liza Minnelli. The trio's single-show asking price of $250,000 was too steep for the Fox to break even. Tickets likely would have been about $100 each.

Now old blue eyes is touring on his own and his price has dropped. He will park his entourage in the cavernous confines of the Fox from June 8 through June 10. Tickets likely will be priced in the $45 to $50 range, which should guarantee Sinatra a payday of about $450,000 if the three shows are sold out.

Mum's the word right now, but look for an announcement in a few weeks of a major exhibitor's plan to start a frequent moviegoers club that will offer free tickets, reduced price admissions, discounts at other entertainment areas, like restaurants and local attractions, plus lots of other goodies.

Only one hitch. Like the airline programs, you will have to go to a lot of movies. One improvement is that after the movie, you will not have to wait an hour for your luggage.

The Repertory Theater of St. Louis' Studio Theater has set an all-time subscription record for its new season, which gets under way Oct. 25 with "A Walk in the Woods."

As of now, a little more than 1,000 subscribers have purchased season seats for the Studio Theater season—a nearly 20 percent increase over last year.

Filming begins Nov. 15 in Rome for "Godfather III" starring Al Pacino, Diane Keaton and Eli Wallach. The movie will be released in either the summer of 1990 or the Christmas season of that year. James Woods, whose film "Immediate Family" opens Oct. 27 in St. Louis, will host "Saturday Night Live" Oct. 28. ... O.J. Simpson has let it slip that there will be a sequel to the very popular film "The Naked Gun," in which he starred. The sequel goes into production in January.

Anybody need a policeman?

Railroad and other law enforcement members gather hundreds strong in Madison

By Andy Slering
Staff writer

MADISON — There was a whole lot of chewing going on.

Boy, could these guys eat! We're talking major nothing here, serious scaring, Rost beast heaped high, Mostaccioli, fried chicken and foaming pitchers of beer.

Good thing there was plenty to eat, plenty to drink. After all, many of them had guns under their jackets.

A shortage could have turned ugly. Almost 450 police officers of various rank and agencies turned out for an appreciation banquet hosted Thursday night by the Missouri-Illinois Railroad Police Association. For the last five years, the banquet has been held at AMVETS Post 204 on Kennedy Drive in Madison.

The association annually gives the dinner as a sort of goodwill offering to the constabulary agencies with which it works—everybody from the FBI and Secret Service down to local municipal police.

The doors opened at 6 p.m. By 8:30, there were no plates left and the mountains of food had been reduced to a few drumsticks, some bread heels and a big bowl of beans.

From the many broad smiles on display, the officers were having more fun than a burglar with the keys to the safe. All sorts of gifts were raffled off: electric shavers, TVs, gym bags, etc.

Special Agent Ken Stallman of Burlington-Northern Railroad was having a good time — especially when the confessed "baseball junkie" found another of his ilk to talk baseball to.

"I can't find my car keys, but I can tell you what Willie Mays hit in 1957!" he said.

Yeah, what? "Three-oh-two!" he said.

"This is the first one of these I've made in five years, 'cause there was always a playoff game going on," Stallman said.

The camaraderie was palpable.

"We have an excellent relationship with all the police agencies in Illinois," said Capt. Bobby Henry, commander of District 11 of the Illinois State Police. "The only difference is the color of the uniform."

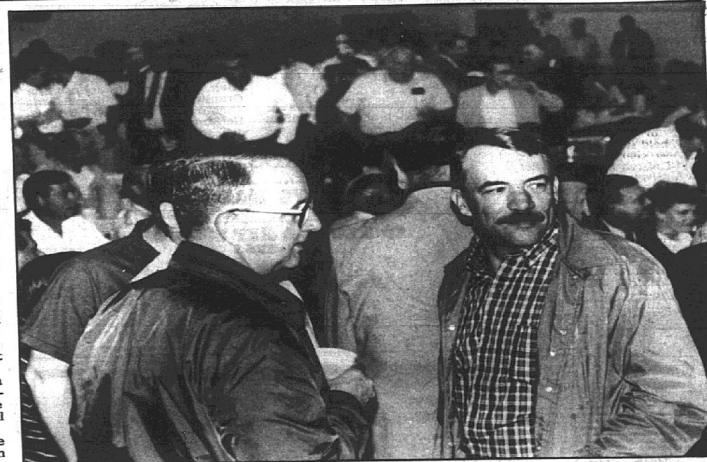

A reporter learned some things about railroad police, known as "bills," "slueths" and "cinder dicks."

Col. Larry Shelby, chief of the 20-man Terminal Railroad Association Police Department, said, "Most people don't know that we have the same powers as any police officer. We hold police commissions in both Missouri and Illinois."

Shelby was interrupted by the amplified voice of Lt. Mark O'Donnell, who had steadily been announcing prize winners from the podium. O'Donnell, a TRRA officer, is also the president of the Missouri-Illinois Railroad Police Association.

"Your attention," O'Donnell said, "We have a request for Rich Miller of the Granite City Police Department."

"The request is from your table ... Get up here with that beer!"

Shelby said most of his men are former municipal police officers. Their duties include arresting trespassers and investigating thefts, derailments, personal injuries of railroad workers, and accidents involving cars and trains.

The work can occasionally be dangerous. TRRA Patrolman J.C. Oliver has been shot at three times in his 18 years on the force.

"The first time I didn't know what it was," Oliver said. "It sounded like a big wasp going over."

Before becoming a railroad bull, Oliver was an army MP who worked on the Jeffrey McDonald

"Fatal Vision" initial murder investigation while stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Oliver said the old hobo types have dwindled to non-existence. The hobos of today are usually Mexicans headed home or to Chicago or New York.

About 10:30 p.m., as a reporter headed for the door, he passed Ken Stallman, of the missing keys and the Willie Mays trivia. Stallman was waving a car key in his hand and crowing to a buddy.

"I won the Buick and you won that damn toaster oven!"

Under heavy grilling, Stallman admitted he was joking about the Buick.

Case closed.

There is a need to boost science, math education

The following is by Jerry Costello, U.S. representative from the 21st Congressional District and a Belleville Democrat.

The day American astronauts landed on the moon marked a great achievement in science and technology, a victory of man over the unknown elements of space. Many people, however, point to that day as the start of a decline in interest and investment in U.S. science and math education, saying once we reached the greatest technological achievement of the decade we lost our goals, and our commitment to science in the process.

Those people may be right. In the past 20 years, American students have dropped when rated internationally in the fields of science and math education. The National Science Foundation's efforts in science education remain far below the levels made by the NSF in the mid-1980's.

In fact, the number of college freshmen planning to major in biological sciences, engineering, physical sciences, and mathematics fell from 21 percent to 14 percent from 1968 to 1987.

At the same time, other nations — such as Japan, France, West Germany and the Soviet Union — have increased their emphasis in science and mathematics. Their investment has been directly related to an economic interest in technology, and many of their programs now equal or will replace American technology in the near future.

Several weeks ago, President Bush announced his desire to establish a manned space station on the moon and proposed a trip to Mars in the near future. In his speech, the President suggested those projects would rekindle the interest among the nation's youth to focus again on science and math studies.

Although the President did not specifically mention how he would fund those voyages, there is no doubt that increased space exploration will generate further excitement and interest in science and math in our nation's schools. This investment is also critical to our nation's economic strength.

While the President's plan was long-term, other proposals are already advancing in Congress. Earlier this year in the House Science, Space and Technology Committee, I spoke in favor of a bill to establish two four-year, $5,000 college scholarships in each congressional district for students excelling in science and math education.

I was happy to see this legislation be approved by the full House in early September. While this is just a small step, I hope it will lead to a greater program of public and private incentives for those pursuing a career in science and math. If we are to regain our international standing in science and technology, those fields must be student priorities.

Calls mayor's moves 'disgusting'

To the editor:

Why doesn't Mr. Cruse spend his time being mayor instead of trying to interfere with the superintendent of streets just because the superintendent exercised his citizen's right to run against him in the last election? I'm sure he can find other things to do for the betterment of the city.

With this animosity going on, I'm sure Mr. Warfield is handicapped in doing his job, since our mayor has control of the council and no doubt the equipment and finances of the street department. I'm also sure he is out of line hiring for the street department.

Who came up with the idea in 1987 of having a two-minute, $25 inspection everytime one has electric connection? I've heard some are paying $10. Do apartment complexes pay $25 each time there is a change in tenants? No doubt that is a manufactured job for a choice of the mayor.

It would be a good idea to put the election behind us and both go on doing their respective jobs and let the voters decide at the polls next time. Let's continue to let anyone who so chooses to seek election without such childish maneuvers as getting back at them.

This is disgusting.

Let Warfield run his department

To the editor:

According to your editorial, there is a possible meeting between Mr. Warfield (superintendent of streets) and Mr. Cruse (mayor) with Walter Milton as mediator. I feel that the only solution to the problem is cooperation between the superintendent and the mayor.

Let's get off Mac Warfield's back

To the editor:

Quote: "Political favoritism in work assignment." This from Mayor Cruse in regard to Mac Warfield.

But what has Cruse done? Taken it upon himself to hire the son of an alderwoman to work on the street department. Isn't this the pot calling the kettle black?

I would like to say that I have always received good work and prompt and courteous service from the street department. However, such a meeting with Mr. Milton as mediator is a big farce since Mr. Milton is a Von Dee Cruse man. It will be two against one.

Why doesn't Mr. Cruse let the man who was elected by the people run the street department?

SADIE BINGER

every time I have called upon the street department for help.

I think Mr. Warfield should be commended for the work he is doing with the beat-up equipment he has to work with.

If we want to build our city up, let's forget the political issue and give support where it is needed. Simply, get off Mac Warfield's case and let him do his job.

Many aided local family after fire

To the editor:

On behalf of Willie and Angyner Glasper and New Salem Missionary Baptist Church, to all the wonderful people in our 17th-City area, thank you and thank you.

Both black and white came to the Glaspers' rescue. The Red Cross of Granite City was right by their side. Special thanks to the Press-Record for the picture and the write-up in the paper.

People are still showing their love and concern. The Glasper family was touched by the help from other people. The family members cried and cried because of the love that you, the people, have shown them during the tragedy of the fire, although they lost everything they had.

They thank God for their lives and the concerned and loving people. They say thanks and never will they forget the public's gifts, prayers and fine words.

Just to know there are still people who care has brought sunlight into their hearts.

May God bless all.

Giving Solidarity fighting chance

The following column is by Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill.

On a rare occasion every decade or so, you instinctively know that history is being made in a dramatic way.

That was the case when President Anwar Sadat visited Jerusalem.

And that is the case today in Poland, where there is a chance for a dramatic breakthrough in the nature of government in Eastern Europe.

For the first time ever, a Communist government with the powers of a dictatorship has permitted a free election to take place, and for the opposition Solidarity party to assume much of the responsibility for governing.

Will the new government have the courage to tackle the difficult inflation problem that plagues Poland?

There are still many unanswered questions. And what has been handed over peacefully by the Communists could be taken away, if the present experiment fails.

That's where the United States comes in. We have to help show that this experiment can work.

I spent six days in Poland, my third trip to Poland over the years but my first trip to Poland since being elected to Congress in 1974. I went there this time with the sense that something shattering in its significance had happened, and I came back with that feeling reinforced.

I also came back with the impression that the present experiment could fail if the United States and other nations do not recognize quickly our great opportunity for freedom and peace. If the experiment succeeds, the result could be a dramatic improvement in the quality of life for people everywhere, particularly for the two superpowers (the United States and the Soviet Union) now engaged in an arms race.

Policy making in Poland is now in the hands of Solidarity. The guns are in the hands of the Communists.

Our guest

I talked to everyone from Lech Walesa, the outgoing, yet thoughtful and reflective Solidarity leader, and the new Prime Minister, Tadeusz Mazowiecki, to the two top Communist officials, President Wojciech Jaruzelski, and the immediate past premier, Mieczyslaw Rakowski.

Primarily, I visited with Solidarity leaders among the government officials, as well as a number of people not directly tied to the government. The quality of the Solidarity leadership is the most impressive. My instinct is that no government has ever been formed by people of greater talent and perspective since our own nation was founded. Because so many of the new leaders of government were jailed by the Communists, they had an unusual chance to reflect on what they might do if the opportunity to govern ever came their way.

And now it has.

I have suggested a program costing slightly more than $30 million a year. A great deal of money but much less than we are providing to several other countries. And it is one-tenth of 1 percent of our defense budget.

Another way to put it is that its cost is slightly more than one-half the cost of one B-2 bomber. Is freedom in Poland worth that gamble? Of course it is.

If the Polish experiment succeeds, Hungary will soon follow a similar path, and the Soviet Union itself is likely to be changed toward greater freedom.

But we must act quickly. It is easy to change history for the worse. Now we have a sudden and dramatic chance to change it for the better.

'News Brothers' promos OK for what they are

I have a surprise for people who know me well. Later.

A major factor in the enormous success enjoyed by KSDK-TV (Channel 5) has been its promotions department—or as it is known in the station—creative services.

The promos for the news department in particular often have outshone the accomplishments of the news department.

Among the most noted promos have been those that featured the "rivalry" between Weather's Bob Richards and Sports' Mike Bush. They were seen in various competitions and confrontations that relied heavily on special effects and the good nature of the audience to accept them.

Now comes to your TV a series of three, 60-second spots featuring Richards and Bush as the "News Brothers." The duo wears hats and dark glasses, all designed to convince you "that KSDK has two very likeable personalities and are not only knowledgeable but are able to poke a little fun at themselves."

Brase, the director of creative services, admits that the three spots, which incidentally, cost more than $100,000, will not be well-received by everyone. But, he said, "If you don't take chances, you're not going to succeed." Some people, he said, will think the promos go too far, but he thinks the promos will tarnish the dignity of the news department.

But he thinks that people who are not offended by the various depictions of Richards and Bush as victims of each other's dirty

Ian MacBryde

That's all?

"Just that one word," Brase said.

Good for him. Disaster narrowly averted, as they say in the news.

After all the unkind words about sports reporting, a tip of the hat is due KMOV-TV (Channel 4), which went to a lot of trouble to track down information on the basketball recruiting problems at Missouri. Gary Apple was the man in Detroit on the story, with Zip Rzepka anchoring. We used to see a lot of that from Rzepka and his people. I hope he can do more.

Any all-star team chosen from the newsrooms of the St. Louis market would have to include Russ Mitchell. He still looks young (tough problem to have, huh?) but he is absolutely first-rate.

I don't know if it means anything, but VH-1 (that's MTV for folks who knew Don Henley when he still was an Eagle) seems to be adopting a softer, more thoughtful tone as the decade draws to a close. Is it simply the way the program is slanted or is it the musical mood for a kinder, gentler '90s?

Lyrics are getting a little better, music a little more introspective. Look out. First thing you know there will be people waging peace.

Ian MacBryde is an independent video producer and former television executive.

BURT REYNOLDS TEACHES his apprentice Casey Siemiaszko how to make nitroglycerine, which is vital in their safecracking profession, in the comedy "Breaking In."

Burt looks bulky as older guy

As an aging safecracker with a teacher's talent and a taste for the good life, Burt Reynolds hits his stride in writer John Sayles' "Breaking In" ().

This leisurely little buddy story directed by Scotland's Bill "Local Hero" Forsythe has some good laughs. Reynolds, as Ernie, and Casey Siemiaszko, as his youthful sidekick, Mike, are two incompatible small-timers who slip and slide into various bogs on the road to riches.

Reynolds, who seems more at home in "Breaking In" than he has in several years, for the first time plays a character older than he really is. Ernie is a professional reasonably content with his life but eager to pass along the tools of his trade and a vast store of safe-busting knowledge to a younger man.

Unfortunately his prospective student is as nutty as he is naive. He's a greenhorn who works at a dull job in a local fire shop and breaks into people's houses for the fun of it. Mike enjoys reading their mail, raiding the fridge and even takes time to short-sheet their beds.

Because the two meet while breaking into the same residence, crafty Ernie figures Mike might prove more valuable as a partner than a witness and takes him under his wing.

Ernie engineers a phony heist to test Mike's nerves and talent, providing intricate instructions on the manufacture of nitroglycerine, an indispensable tool for a safecracker. Ernie also teaches Mike how to plan a job with the proper "cover" and shows him how to launder hot money at the race track and spend it on hotter women without becoming emotionally involved.

The duo's troubles commence when Mike decides he is in love with a girl who turns out to be a hooker. So he quits his tire shop job, spends cold cash for a fancy car and a high-rise apartment. An outraged Ernie bawls him out for living an ostentatious life, a sure tip-off to the cops.

The film goes for the predictable finish with the two men planning a Fourth of July heist at a Portland, Ore., amusement park, a robbery that will allow Ernie to retire. For Ernie safecracking no longer is fun. There are too many Mafia guys lurking around demanding a cut and the fancy security systems are hard to figure out.

Things don't turn out as expected, nor does the ending of "Breaking In." The film closes on a good-humored, rueful note that even the score between the cocky young newcomer and savvy old-timer for whom the safest safes always are unsafe.

Rated R (language, sexual situations). Running time: 110 minutes. Critic's rating based on four stars.

Stones' effort best in decade

By Alan Sculley
Staff affiliate

Guitarist Keith Richards has made it no secret that he would like to see the Rolling Stones stay together for a long time.

He sees the Stones as the only band that has been around long enough to take rock from its formative years and grow the music into a new maturity—much as their heroes, such as Muddy Waters and John Lee Hooker, have done for the blues.

It is an interesting objective. But the problem is none of the albums the Stones have done for the past decade have come close to delivering the kind of music you would expect from "the world's greatest rock 'n' roll band."

By and large, "Emotional Rescue," "Tattoo You," "Undercover" and "Dirty Work" have been uneven works that paled sharply compared with the records the band released at their creative peak, such as "Sticky Fingers," "Let It Bleed" and "Exile On Main Street."

The Stones, musically speaking, have not been at their best, gracefully, and as such you have to wonder how much they could really accomplish by staying together—especially considering the much publicized recent feud between Richards and singer Mick Jagger.

But just when expectations have reached a low point, the Stones somehow have found fresh inspiration. The recently released "Steel Wheels" is the band's best album since their early 1970s heyday.

New rockers in the classic Stones mold, such as "Sad, Sad, Sad" and "Hold On To Your Hat," crackle with an intensity heard only sporadically since "Punishin' Dice," "Happy" and "All Down The Line" from the "Exile On Main Street" album in 1972.

While the Stones may have never lost their ability to surprise and delight at the same time, they rarely have shown this ability on recent albums.

"Steel Wheels," however, has daring music that breaks new ground.

"Blinded by Love" is a country-blues number that may remind some of "Far Away Eyes" from the "Some Girls" LP. But where "Far Away Eyes" came off like a novelty tune, "Blinded by Love" is a serious song more in the vein of an older Stones hit, "Wild Horses."

Another surprise on "Steel Wheels" is "Break the Spell," which is a throwback to the classic blues of Waters, Hooker and Howlin' Wolf. The song features some surprisingly sassy harmonica from Jagger.

Even more unusual is "Continental Drift," a song that sports an intriguing collision of tribal rhythms and Middle Eastern sounds. The song features the Moroccan instrumental group, the Master Musicians of Joujouka, with Bachir Attar, a Parafina on African instruments.

Only a couple of tunes disappoint. "The Ballad of Slipping Away," is sung by Richards who has the voice to match his rough and haggard looks. Ballads are clearly not his vocal forte. "Rock and A Hard Place" sounds like another of the retired rockers that have populated the band's albums of the past decade.

But other songs—"Mixed Emotions," "Terrifying Love," "Can't Be Seen" and "Almost Hear You Sigh," are solid and interesting.

Whether "Steel Wheels" is just a brief return to glory—as was the solid 1978 LP "Some Girls"—or the start of a Stones resurgence remains to be seen. But at least "Steel Wheels" provides a good reason to care where the Stones go from here.

Stones concert here remembered again

A well-dressed man fired questions at Rolling Stones publicist Bennett Kleinberg at Busch Stadium's stage entrance prior to the group's concert Sunday (Sept. 17).

"Are you with the show? Where is Roy? I'm a personal friend of Keith Richards. We're neighbors on Jamaica. I have a house there. Who are you?"

Kleinberg casually fielded the questions and excused himself from the man and his chieftain. It wasn't his first stage-door affair.

"Keith and I are really tight! His picture is on my wall!" Whose picture was the affirmation. "You want to know about Keith Richards—ask me. We play dominoes—talk Rolling Stones. When he sees me out here, I'm in the limo... going to the show!"

Half a block away, five friends from the small town of Malvern, Ark. posed for a pre-concert snapshot, 19th-row tickets in hand.

"They were close enough in '81, but none of us could afford to go," said Gary Gray, 33. "These tickets went on sale at 9; we started calling at 8. Came up this morning on a budget flight."

you know."

Nobody cared... their boogie shoes carried them happily down the entrance portal. They were finally going to see the Stones.

The stage looked like something from way "beyond Thunderdome," promising a high-voltage life of its own, now complete in the towering scaffolding, amplifiers, giant tubes and other massive trappings.

The scene was quite different from the Illinois university field house where Marty Norton, a 38-year-old sales manager from Champaign, Ill., first saw the Rolling Stones perform before a standing room only crowd of 10,000 in 1969.

"Basically, my presence here is a midlife crisis kind of thing," Norton explained. "I did the Who; now the Stones. I'm here for the happening."

St. Charles businessman Fred Waelter was chaperoning his son, Fred III's 12th birthday party, which was happening at 12th-century stage.

"My kid dropped this on me," Waelter said. "It's great!"

The surplus Waelter wore proved that it wasn't his first concert, but his son and guests were on their maiden voyage to the world of high-tech rock and roll.

"It's great so far," Fred III said. "We are Stones fans!"

"Major Stones fans!"

"Definitely!"

Stephanie Mills returns to her roots on 'Home'

By Alan Sculley

To make her next step forward in her rapidly rising career, Stephanie Mills took a step back to where things began for her.

Her latest album, "Home," is named after the song Mills sang to close "The Wiz," the musical that launched her career. Her new version of "Home," a sunny upbeat ballad, features a vocal assist from the a cappella group Take 6. But it is Mills' impassioned singing that clearly steals the show.

Quiet storm ballads long have been Mills' strong suit. And "Home" isn't the only one her singing ticks things up to hurricane force. The silky soulful "Comfort Of A Man" is another first-rate ballad that features a passionate vocal from Mills.

The album's current hit, "Something in the Way (You Make Me Feel)," written by St. Louis native Angela Winbush, is a poppier ballad that also is impressive.

The other ballads on the album—"Real Love" and "So Good, So Right"—are not quite as distinctive, but Mills' singing again is a pleasure to hear.

On the rest of the album, Mills sticks to uptempo tunes. Mills generally has not been as good at dance tracks as she is on ballads, but she is improving.

Three tracks offer an element that raises them above the ordinary. "I Come to You" features a snappy synthesizer riff that floats around a strong synthesizer bass line. "Ain't No Cookin'" finds Mills delivering a positive, snappy synthesizer riff that floats around a strong synthesizer bass line. "Ain't No Cookin'" finds Mills delivering a positive, snappy synthesizer riff that floats around a strong synthesizer bass line.

Considering that Mills already is a platinum selling artist, "Home" won't be a breakthrough in a commercial sense. But from an artistic standpoint, Mills clearly has raised her game a notch or two this time.

Village needs waste disposal plan

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

PONTON BEACH — Everybody should start thinking about trash.

That was the message village officials heard during a recent meeting at which new recycling laws were the topic.

Separating garbage from items to be recycled and all lawn waste will be banned from landfills beginning next July.

Madison County Board member Don Rea, a former village trustee and a member of the county's solid waste management committee, wanted to know if the village had done anything toward conforming with the new regulations.

Rea, who lives in the village, said the county has accepted the final draft for long-range plans governing waste disposal to meet mandatory state laws with final action by the county board expected by midsummer.

The county must reduce its solid waste matter by 25 percent over the next five years, he said. By 1991, all counties are required to be recycling 15 percent of all solid wastes.

"Starting July 1990, no more lawn and garden waste can be accepted at an Illinois landfill. So we have to figure some way to dispose of that," Rea said.

"A lot of new laws will be going into effect and landfills will only accept certain waste. We need to start preparing," he advised the trustees.

Municipal and township governments must prepare their own plan with the county responsible for developing the overall long range plan, inspecting landfills, enforcing laws and helping to coordinate implementation of the plan.

Residents should be asked now to start putting items in separate bags which will be mandatory for any garbage pickup in the future, Trustee Loren Madison said.

John Chalovich, the solid-waste coordinator for Madison County, was unable to attend the meeting, but plans to meet with trustees at a later date to answer questions, Rea said.

Nold, county manager of Milan Landfill and Chain of Rocks Landfill and a member of Madison County Solid Waste Task Force, was also at the meeting.

"As of July 1 next year there is a ban in the State of Illinois against accepting garden waste, such as leaves and grass clippings, at landfills. You can't put them in the garbage and you can't put them in a landfill," Nold said.

If an area compost facility is not available, a homeowner will have to make his own compost pile or let the leaves lay in the yard, he said.

State EPA regulations also prohibit open burning of leaves. New state laws concerning recycling and composting also must be adopted and implemented by local communities before March 1, 1991, Nold said.

"It's not the choice of the industry or the county that we do this, it is the state law," he said.

Village Attorney Keith Jensen asked if Nold's company started a pilot program in Glen Carbon and the Milan executive said, "Yes, we did."

"Are any of the pilot programs available in this area?" Jensen asked.

"I would think so, but a lot of communities want to get on a program and there are lots of requests," Nold said.

Waste management services offered include a three-bin system with the homeowner separated within 300 feet of the area proposed for rezoning were rezoned, a village official said. About 25 area residents, most opposed to the zoning change, attended the on-site hearing.

Donna Hogan, who resides in the area, is planning to purchase the property from Luehmann and construct single-family residences, pending the zoning change.

As many as 150 homes could eventually be built in several stages on the 70 acres, if zoning is changed from business to single-family residential, Hogan said recently.

A two-thirds negative vote of the Village Board of Trustees would be needed to overturn the Zoning Board of Appeals decision. The plan, Village Board Clerk Mary Warren said Friday.

The question was raised at an earlier meeting and a legal opinion has since been given by Attorney Keith Jensen.

Publicizing clubs or organizations is the topic of a new booklet from Golden Apple Press, "Into Print: A Handbook for Publicity Chairmen," which is intended to help group publicists understand the news process.

Written by a former feature writer and editor, the booklet looks at the problems of publicity from the newsman's viewpoint and helps the volunteer publicist think like a reporter.

Most news releases are discarded because they lack news," according to the author. "Newspeople determine newsworthiness. Know what your newspaper considers news."

The booklet gives the volunteer publicity chairman the basic tools he needs to get his news into print and on the air. Treating press releases and organizing publicity are discussed and pages for making a publicity notebook are included. Also included is a brief stylebook covering word usage and punctuation problems.

The booklet is available for $5.95 from Golden Apple Press, P.O. Box 41, Taberg, N.Y. 13471.

All the news: Students in Dot Bailey's fourth grade class at Prather School use the Press-Record in the classroom to study vocabulary, spelling, science and social studies. "I think it's important that they learn what's going on right under their noses and down the street before they cross the river and see the world," said Bailey.

Career awareness program set to continue at Granite City High

"What will I do after graduation?"

That's a question asked by most high school students. New opportunities in careers that didn't exist a decade ago make occupational choices a perplexing matter.

Career Awareness Exploring, a program developed by the Boy Scouts of America to give high school students a better understanding of various careers, is currently being offered at Granite City High School.

The first phase of the program took place in the spring of 1989 when students completed a survey to determine their career interests. First and second career choices were identified and made available to the school's guidance counselors to assist in vocational planning.

This week the students have the opportunity to sign up for a series of seminars on the careers which were selected most frequently in the survey. The talks will last about 15 to 20 minutes and be followed by a brief question and answer session.

Speakers will be experts in their professions and come from a wide variety of occupations. To provide balance, at least two speakers for each career are planned.

The seminars are to be held during school hours and scheduled to cause the least possible disruption. Teachers are being encouraged to integrate seminar topics into their lessons for greater subject understanding.

Tentative plans call for about a dozen seminars to run from November through April. Careers to be covered include law, nursing, teaching, architecture, small business management, accounting, carpentry, architecture and cosmetology (hair styling).

The administrative cost of the program is $4 per student, two dollars being paid by the student and two by local civic organizations. For those not financially able, scholarships are available.

Students will be able to learn more about the program and sign up this Monday, Oct. 16, during lunch periods in the school cafeteria. Parents interested in enrolling their son or daughter may contact Mike or Jim at 876-0686 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

College applications require the student to do some 'homework'

The January deadline for most college applications may seem far away, but it's not too soon for high school seniors and even juniors to begin thinking about the kind of college they'd like to attend, according to Theodore O'Neill, director of admissions at the University of Cincinnati.

With so many institutions to choose from, finding the best one can seem a formidable task. But experts advise that students who do their "homework" before they apply can find the process to be less confusing and even enjoyable.

No matter what kind of school students want to attend, they will make better decisions if they think first about what they want to get out of college, according to O'Neill. He suggests that students applying to college should first "determine what's important to you about going to college."

The answer, he said, "will determine the kinds of questions you ask of guidance counselors and college representatives."

The best school for a student isn't necessarily the most prestigious one. Students and their families place too much importance on a college's prestige, according to O'Neill.

"People tend to look at images rather than at what a place really is," O'Neill said. "High school students and their parents should be wary of lists that rank schools. You shouldn't go by what the media says is the best and the second best."

It also can turn out to be a mistake to pick a school based on a special field, especially a technical field, because the number of students who stay with their first choice of a technical field is quite small.

"I'm not saying that everyone should go to a liberal arts college, but to a place that's good in a variety of things. If not, you take a chance on the rest of your education if you change your mind."

Another mistake that students sometimes make is to choose a school because it's familiar, or because friends from high school attend it, or because they feel it's a place where they won't have to work too hard. O'Neill understands that high school seniors who have studied hard might feel that they need a break. They may also think their grades will be higher at a less challenging school, increasing their chances of getting into a medical, law or business school.

But students who look at college as an interlude between the pressures of high school and the hard work of graduate school or a first job sell themselves short, he said. "Once they've recovered from the rigors of high school, the thoughtful students will be disappointed by less than a serious education and the others may have a good time but never know what they've missed. They'll never know that it's great to be 18 years old and to be really challenged in an intellectual way."

After a student has compiled a list of schools he or she is sincerely interested in attending, it's a good idea to arrange to visit each campus to observe classes, talk with current students and meet with a member of the admissions staff. If it's not possible for the student to go to the campus, many schools will arrange for the student to be interviewed by one of its graduates who live nearby. Some schools also have videotapes of their campuses available to their high schools.

When the student arrives on campus for a visit, O'Neill said the most important questions to ask are those based on a student's own particular interests.

Applicants frequently ask about class size. By the usual answers about student-faculty ratio aren't very revealing. Instead, he suggests that students ask more about class size and the interaction between students and faculty members than anything we can say. If a campus visit isn't possible, the student might want to ask about the size of any required classes and who teaches them."

O'Neill says students should also recognize that they're not looking for just a school but also a community where they live, and so should think about whether a school's environment suits them.

O'Neill advises parents to try to help their children without pressuring them. "The parents who seem to do the best in the process are the ones who show only enthusiasm and no anxiety."

Students generally appreciate their parents' interest in where they go to college. But if their parents seem too anxious that they make the "right choice"—usually a narrow range of schools or even just one school that the parents have all their hopes on—"that anxiety is sure to be transferred to the student and makes the search for a college a tedious and rather than a pleasant experience."

While students try to decide which college fills the bill, parents must decide how to pay the bills. This year, tuition, room and board at some of the nation's top private universities will exceed $20,000.

"I don't know what gets people over the shock, because $20,000 must be staggering," O'Neill said. "But if we can talk to these families early enough, we can tell them that they won't necessarily be the actual price to them. It's the cost of the education, but not always the price."

While it may cost a university $20,000 to house and educate a student for one year at many good colleges, fewer than half the families pay that much.

Many of the country's competitive colleges—including the University of Chicago—have a "need-blind" admissions policy, which means that admissions committees don't consider a family's financial status when deciding whether or not to admit a student. At these schools, families are asked to pay only what they can reasonably be expected to contribute.

On the trail of 'the Belleville schools'

If I've heard it once I've heard it a million times. And I've said before, I told you a million times that I never exaggerate.

During my many season previews over the course of the year, the coaches in our area can almost always be counted on to mention something about "the Belleville schools."

Not Belleville East. Not Belleville West. Not Belleville Althoff. "The Belleville schools." Coaches and fans in our area — and probably those in Collinsville, Edwardsville and Alton — tend to lump "the Belleville schools" together.

That's probably not always fair, but you'll have to admit there are more successful varsity programs at those three high schools than unsuccessful ones. The threat of "the Belleville schools" seems to loom largest in girls sports. And rightly so. Outside of soccer — which "the Belleville schools" haven't started yet as a girls varsity sport — and track, where no large school makes a dent around here, the East St. Louis Lincoln, girls from Belleville are the measuring sticks for all the other distasteful high school athletes.

It's true more for the two public high schools than Althoff. West makes a habit of going to the state volleyball tournament, and its toughest competitor in the Southwestern Conference is usually East. And the Lady Maroons are state-ranked again this year. East won the Illinois Class AA softball title last spring. Pitcher Mikki McPherson was the tournament MVP. And the Lady Lancers had a No. 2 pitcher, Ramona Nunez, who was better than most other teams' aces.

The hot girls sport in Granite City right now is tennis. And it's of no small satisfaction around here that we can stand ready to make a move. They lost no one to graduation from last year's regional championship team. Jennifer Cavness just might be the

Well, what's new? Same old stuff

A guy came up to me on the street the other day. He said, "What's new?"

So I bit him.

No, wait. That's an old joke. In fact, a couple of jokes. Old and bad. But so is Don Zimmer, so what the hey.

The deal is: The joke's on us. Everything that's new around here really is old.

Consider:

The Blues are trumpeting a New Look. They shipped the old coach, signed up some new kids. This is the New Generation. This team is so young some players still have their own teeth.

A lot of people are excited about this new, young team. The arena has been packed. Good for the Blues. Good for the fans who get glory days ahead.

But we've been this way before. Harry Ornest looked good when he was new. Mike Shanahan looked good when he was new. Brian Sutter looked good when he was new. We were excited. All of that looked good, but the Blues turned out to be the same 500 franchise it was before each of the new looks.

This time things may be different...

Things really are new this fall with the University of Missouri Tigers. A new look, a new coach, lots of new hopes. Fans are excited.

Bob Stull isn't Woody Widenhofer. He's organized. He's disciplined. He won't take any guff. Just last spring he slapped a couple benchwarmers with suspensions. Take that, lollygaggers!

If the new look, new coach, new enthusiasm have a familiar ring, I remind you to think back to the start of the Woody dance. Beware of people with a familiar ring, they might turn your finger green.

But who knows, this time things may be different.

The NBA is bringing a showcase to town Sunday when the Los Angeles Lakers play Seattle in an exhibition game. The NBA says we're here; the city is mildly encouraging. You never know, huh? It would be nice to have an NBA team, to see the Lakers, the Celtics, the Pistons. Some people are excited.

Seems like that idea has some mileage on it. Didn't we have this discussion last year when Michael Jordan brought his magic act to town? Who knows, though, maybe with a new downtown arena, maybe this time it'll be different...

Speaking of arenas, do you think Anheuser-Busch will lick its wounds and somehow

Junior Bills flatten Warriors

ST. LOUIS — It was Friday the 13th and there was a full moon hovering. Ron Yates was maybe hoping for something a little supernatural. Instead, he came away with a haunted feeling.

In a game they thought they had a chance to win, the Warriors didn't come close as the St. Louis University High Junior Billikens smoked them 31-0. Granite City fell to 2-5 while SLUH improved to 3-4.

"They were a better 2-4 team than we were," said Yates. "Again, they had some quickness and it killed us."

Much of the quickness came from flanker Larry Reed. He caught three passes for 122 yards. Two of his catches set up first-half touchdowns and the other was a 64-yard touchdown of his own. Sophomore quarterback Steve Schnur was only 4 of 13, but the four completions went for 129 yards and he would have had more if his receivers had better hands.

"They dropped some balls on him," said Yates. "He's a good-looking quarterback for a sophomore."

The Warriors moved the ball through the air very well themselves. Bobby Thomas completed 10 of 20 passes for 191 yards, but he also threw three interceptions. Steve Evanoff caught five passes for 39 yards. But Granite City had only 45 yards rushing.

"We thought we could complete the short passes on them," said Yates. "We did, but we broke down a couple of times."

Schnur hit Reed on a quick out on the Junior Bill's first play and Reed broke it down the left sideline for 38 yards to the Warrior 33. Eight plays later, Schnur sneaked in from a yard out and Brian Leary's extra point made it 7-0.

The Warriors moved the ball on their next series as Thomas hit Tom Miner for 11 yards, Darryn Yates for seven and Evanoff for five. Then he went up top for a 35-yard completion to Yates. But a procedure penalty on third and one stalled the drive. Thomas was then nailed for a loss and then threw incomplete on fourth and 9.

"That was a big penalty," said Ron Yates. "We

2nd half explosion beats Comanches

By Dave Whaley

GRANITE CITY — The fans at Senior Night had to be a little anxious at halftime.

The Warriors were locked in a scoreless tie with the Cahokia Comanches on Thursday and had missed a ton of scoring chances in the first half. But things finally clicked in the final 40 minutes. John Van Buskirk's hat trick paved the way to a 5-0 win. Danny Weathers added a goal and an assist in the final regular-season home game for 15 seniors.

Van Buskirk, who made a recruiting visit to the University of Connecticut this weekend and missed Saturday's game at Belleville West, could have had several more goals. He and his teammates poured on the pressure in the first half but couldn't score.

"They funneled the middle on us and made us work," said Warrior coach Gene Baker. "We wanted to stick with our seniors as much as possible, but we had to go with our regular line-up a little in the second half."

"As you can see, we don't have much manpower on our bench," said Cahokia coach Craig Garlin after his team fell to 2-3. "The loose balls we were getting to in the first half we were too tired to reach in the second half. And Granite City just has so much depth. It seems like they have about two dozen of those little dark-haired kids who can dribble the ball extremely well."

The Warriors (15-5) outshot the Comanches 19-0 and had nine corner kicks to none for Cahokia, but didn't take the lead until 42:12. Chad Lignoul's shot from the left side banged off the

Trojans cut down by Midgets

FREEBURG — Do you believe in deja vu?

The Trojans were haunted on Friday by memories of Dupu two weeks ago. Madison, which had four starters ineligible, was mauled by Freeburg 54-8 at Community Field.

Similar to the Dupu game, Madison proved to be a sacrificial lamb on Homecoming night. Freeburg (5-2) exploded for 40 points in the first-half and outgained the Trojans 227-160. The only bright spot for Madison (2-5) was Tony Treadway, who rushed for 107 yards on 27 carries. Treadway also scored Madison's only touchdown, catching a 23-yard scoring pass from Cernyn Thomas in the third quarter.

Entering the game, there were doubts concerning the Midgets' morale following their emotional loss to Dupu last week. Those doubts were squelched quickly when Todd Lannert returned the opening kickoff in yards for a touchdown.

"That touchdown set the tone of the game," said Freeburg coach Dennis Dalke. "Our kids really needed that shot in the arm because they were flat during the pre-game workouts. And I almost had

Harriers take second in SWC meet

By Mike Kelly
Correspondent

GRANITE CITY — The 1989 Southwestern Conference cross country meet had its share of sure shots and surprises on Friday.

The Belleville West girls team, led by sophomore Donna Auer, dominated the field, while the boys competition saw Belleville East finish first. The Lancers, employing a lineup comprised of two sophomores and a freshman, nosed out the host Warriors by three points for the team title.

Doug Olroyd, one of the two sophomores used by first-year coach Wes Talley, finished third, completing the course in the time of 16:38.

"Belleville East is a very strong team," said Granite City coach Dave McClain. "Talley moved some of his sophomores into the varsity ranks and the move paid off. Those kids have done the job for him all year."

Ed Talley felt his two seniors, Matt Bergen and Dave Dumbroski, who have had disappointing seasons, saved the day for the Lancers.

"I'm very surprised by our finish," said Talley. "I gave these underclassmen the opportunity to perform and they accepted the challenge. But there's no way we could have won this meet without those seniors."

It's been a touch-and-go relationship between Talley, who replaced last year's coach, Dick Hays, and his seniors.

"I told the seniors two weeks before the Peoria Invitational (Sept. 26) that if they didn't register certain times on the course, I would go with the underclassmen in the regional," said Talley. "I just felt they weren't giving me their best efforts. They had a fore-warning and didn't respond."

"But I guess those seniors, Bergen and Dumbroski, were the ones who stepped up."

crossbar. The rebound went to Van Buskirk cruising down the middle and he headed in his ninth goal.

That was the snowball which started the avalanche. Sean Bain sent Van Buskirk into the clear at 51:06 and he calmly hit the lower left corner to make it 2-0. Jamie Dake followed at 57:34 with his first varsity goal. Danny Weathers got the assist as Dake made no mistake on a rebound.

Van Buskirk completed his hat trick at 62:26, outscoring everyone to head Nick Zeffo's corner kick. Then Weathers got his second goal of the year at 75:00 with a blast from a sharp angle to the far corner. John Jones got an assist as Baker used his bench liberally throughout the game.

"Their goalie played very well and we just had to remind our guys of some things at halftime," said Baker.

The Comanches packed it in on defense all night long. In fact, there were frequently 11 blue shirts inside the penalty area. That frustrated the Warriors in the first half, but it didn't provide much business for Ron O'Sha and Tim Henson. O'Sha played the first three quarters and Henson the fourth to share the shutout.

"We did exactly what we planned, but it was hard to get any kind of an attack mounted," said Garlin. "Whatever Gene told his players at halftime must have been better than what I said. They sure have a lot of skilled players."

NOTES: Tuesday's game at McCluer North will be played at Koch Field in northwest St. Louis County. Junior varsity action begins at 5 p.m., not 4 p.m., as listed on the schedule. The varsity game should start at approximately 7:45. The game will be televised by Centcom Cable and will be aired on a tape-delayed basis on Channel 10 both Wednesday and Thursday at 5 p.m. Jay Robertson, the Warriors' second-leading scorer, will have to sit out the next three games due to grades. He also missed the games Thursday and Saturday. Robertson will be back for the second regional game.

get involved with the project of getting a new indoor facility off the ground? A-B could put gas in the deal.

But weren't we hoping A-B would get the ball rolling on a new arena last year?

Maybe this time, huh? Maybe it'll be different...

Did you hear the one about the Cardinals being interested in buying some free agent help for a team that's close? Maybe Mark Langston. Wouldn't that be hot? Now that's something to get excited about.

And did you hear the one about the Cardinals thinking they might make a trade to get some help? Not Steve Lake and Curt Ford for Milt Thompson, but a Big Deal.

Maybe Joe Carter is coming to St. Louis. Maybe Eric Davis will become Eric DeRind.

I heard all of that. In the fall of 1988. Who knows though, maybe this time...

And there is talk about an NFL expansion franchise. Serious talk. Nearly 50,000 people showed up and paid $20 apiece at a pre-season game here to prove they were excited about that possibility.

There really seems to be some progress here. Jerry Clinton and Fran Murray actually have done something. They threw a party. And an exhibition game.

Of course, there's no NFL team here. And there won't be one next year.

1991? Maybe...

Certainly, you've heard that a World Series is coming. Unfortunately, the Cubs aren't playing in it.

Maybe next year.

No, probably not.

Come to think of it, maybe we are making progress.

Compared to the Cubs.

area's dominant player, with Kim Pawlak a solid outside threat to go with Caviness' play under the basket.

But the Lady Warriors won't really prove they've arrived until they beat, well, you guessed it. They were 0-4 against East and West last year, and the games weren't too close.

One of these days — and it might be soon — that will change.

Lady Kahok spikers edge Lady Warriors

By Mike Kelly

GRANITE CITY — Never give up the ship no matter how bleak the situation might be.

Collinsville broke a four-game losing streak by upsetting the Lady Warriors 15-8 and 15-11 on Thursday at Memorial Gymnasium.

The victory nailed down second place in the Southwest Conference for the Lady Kahoks, 11-10 overall and 7-3 in the SWC.

"We really needed this game," said Collinsville coach Susan Jefferies. "This game was a morale booster for our kids going into the final week of the regular season. We just haven't been playing as sharp as we were earlier in the year."

It was Lady Kahok captain Mary Hanvey who sparked Collinsville after the Lady Warriors (5-17, 3-7) led both games early.

Hanvey sparked a 10-point streak in the first game, helping Collinsville wipe out an early 6-2 deficit. She had four points from the setter position and a pair of spikes. It was more of the same in the second contest.

Falling behind 4-2, the Lady Kahoks pulled off the comeback heroics once again. CHS rattled off eight straight points, taking the lead for good. But Granite City did get to within 12-11 before the Lady Kahoks turned out the lights. As usual, Hanvey played a major role in the comeback. She picked up five points from the setter spot, a block and a spike.

"Hanvey is an excellent player," said Granite City coach Natalie Buster. "She's just a vacuum cleaner out there chasing everything down. But I feel her biggest asset is the leadership she provides for her team. She's very talkative and communicates with her teammates well."

didn't have many penalties (two for 10 yards), but that one hurt.

On SLUH's first play after that, Reed got behind everyone for his 64-yard touchdown pass and that was about it. The Junior B's went 47 yards on eight plays on their next series, with Schnur hitting Jay Schuster in the right corner of the end zone for a seven-yard touchdown pass with 3:09 left in the first half to make it 21-0.

Leahy was inches short on a 44-yard field goal at the end of the first half, but hit a 33-yarder in the third quarter. Corey Durbin replaced Schnur at quarterback in the fourth quarter and scored on a five-yard run to round out the scoring.

"There were three or four big plays which hurt us," said Yates. "It's hard to say what happened for sure until we look at the films. I thought we would give them a good game. I don't want to say too much negative, but I'm sure thinking a lot."

The Warriors got fired up late in the third quarter when Terry Noud got what they thought was a late hit after a 25-yard run on a draw play. But no flag was thrown as the Warrior bench howled.

"We got fired up a little, but not enough to change the game," said Yates. "This is the most disappointing game so far. We thought we could compete here and we didn't. But SLUH has played some close games, so maybe they're better than their record."

The Warriors have to bounce back for Friday's Homecoming game against Alton. The Redbirds figure to come in at 1-6 since they played at East St. Louis on Saturday.

The boys race was highlighted by a strong finish between Justin Baker of East St. Louis and Lance Reynolds of Granite City. Reynolds led through most of the race (a 2.95-mile course), but Baker, who stayed right behind the leader throughout the heat, pulled ahead down the stretch to win the event by six seconds in a time of 16:30.

"I just followed him to pick up the pace," said Baker, a junior. "(Reynolds) has a strong start to his races and I knew running step-for-step with him I would die at the end. So I stayed behind him, allowing him to acknowledge my presence. After the first mile, I could tell he was tiring a bit and it allowed me to take control of the pace. That's why I had the stronger kick at the end."

"Baker kept me on my toes," said Reynolds. "He ran a strong race and was on my heels all the way. It was pretty hot (87 degrees at the start of the race) and my stamina was affected down the stretch, which is why he was stronger than me at the finish."

"We just aren't a warm-weather running team," said McClain. "We do better when the weather is cooler. But that takes nothing away from Baker, who's a very strong runner."

"But I was pleased with our performance. Brian Seiz ran a strong race, finishing fourth, and he's improving with every outing. But our middle runners could have done better. We'll need that in the regional."

The Warriors will be in the Edwardsville Regional next Saturday. That field will include some of the area's top runners and powerful East St. Louis Lincoln.

The girls' competition was at Belleville West. The Maroons placed five of their runners among the top nine in the race. And Auer, who had a winning time of 13:49, finished well ahead of the field. Teammate Jenny Hoke was second in the time of 14:08, while Beth Hays of Collinsville was fourth with a time of 14:28.

"I was very pleased with my performance today," said Auer. "I've been running very strong this season and I have to thank my former coach (Norm Armstrong) on the advice he gave me last year. He told me to attend the camp at St. Edwardsville this summer. That camp taught me to better my form and made me run a lot of miles to build more durability for this season."

The game was also a paycheck for the Midgets, who were denied a playoff spot last season when they lost to Madison.

"We pumped that into the kids all week," said Dalke. "We felt we should have beaten them last year. But our kids came into this season with three goals in mind."

"One was to win the conference championship, the second goal was to make the playoffs and the third was to match the best record (7-2) in school history. Two of those goals are still realistic and reachable. And winning this game tonight tells me our kids want to finish the regular season on an upswing."

"We pumped that into the kids all week," said Dalke. "We felt we should have beaten them last year. But our kids came into this season with three goals in mind."

"One was to win the conference championship, the second goal was to make the playoffs and the third was to match the best record (7-2) in school history. Two of those goals are still realistic and reachable. And winning this game tonight tells me our kids want to finish the regular season on an upswing."

Freeburg's special teams actually allowed the Midgets to take control of the contest. Rubbing salt into the wound, Freeburg had Lambert return another kickoff 40 yards later in the game. The Midgets also blocked a punt, which set up a scoring drive, and on the kickoff coverage Freeburg never allowed Madison to get beyond its own 41 on eight attempts. Freeburg's defense also forced the Trojans to cough up the ball five times.

"I expect our special teams to create something all the time," said Dalke. "This is the best special teams unit I've been associated with in my six years at Freeburg. The reason we're so sharp in this area concerns our depth."

"We have the luxury of playing certain people on the special teams only, which keeps our people fresh. And thanks to my assistant coach, Phil Watson, our kids have taken a lot of pride to play in this area."

"We've got some quality people handling those responsibilities, and many of them are juniors and seniors. Experience really helps our cause. But these kids are hungry to make something happen. And you saw their intensity tonight."

After the first mile, I could tell he was tiring a bit and it allowed me to take control of the pace. That's why I had the stronger kick at the end."

"Baker kept me on my toes," said Reynolds. "He ran a strong race and was on my heels all the way. It was pretty hot (87 degrees at the start of the race) and my stamina was affected down the stretch, which is why he was stronger than me at the finish."

"We just aren't a warm-weather running team," said McClain. "We do better when the weather is cooler. But that takes nothing away from Baker, who's a very strong runner."

Child changes; so does room's look

It wasn't easy persuading my husband, John, to change the plaid wallpaper he had struggled to line up so perfectly in the boys' playroom.

That happened in 1980 after we had just brought our first daughter home from the hospital. I was adamant that her room look the way I had always dreamed a little girl's room should look.

No amount of his protests, not, "But I just papered that room," or "Don't you remember how hard it was to line up that blasted blue plaid?" was going to sway me from my intention to pink the place up for little Kate. It took me a bit longer than I had figured, but even John finally agreed that it was time to make the room more feminine. After years of bunk beds and airplane wallpaper, it was wonderful to pore over sample books filled with tea party scenes, rainbows and all forms of cuddly creatures.

It was love at first sight when I turned the page and came face to face with the field of tiny pink flowers on a white background. Thankfully, the paper was a breeze to apply and we found the perfect pink to paint the wall behind her crib on the very first try.

Over the past few years, we have added a little at a time to make the room all Kate's, whether it be the unfinished shelf I painted to hold her figurine collection, the perfect lamp shade I found at a craft show, or the counted cross stitched piece I worried I might finally finish by her wedding day. We dyed her comforter to match the ruffled curtains and stuffed puffy pink and white ginger-ham letters that spelled out her name to hang over her bed.

It didn't matter that the room was chauvinistically pink and pretty; that was what I'd planned all along. And I felt so pleased every time Kate invited a friend in to give her the royal tour of her castle.

But, of course, it's no longer 1980. Our baby girl is 9 years old now and making a few decorating choices of her own. The first changes were subtle: a moved figurine, a stuffed animal handed down to her little sister, a request that we remove the letters that spelled out her name because they were so "babyish."

And now overnight it seems, the pretty walls of tiny pink flowers are gone, covered with posters of Kate's favorite singing idols. The smallest wall, the one with the window, has been proclaimed her "Debby Gibson wall." The other three, including her door and the entire expanse of closet, now are the home of every picture she can rustle, borrow or beg of NKOTB. (For those of you not blessed with pre-teen-age girls, the NKOTB stand for a group, New Kids on the Block.)

Kate and her friends hold contests to see who can recite the five boys' names the fastest, listen intently to their songs and inform each other of any and all tidbits or information about the group whether it's printed, broadcast or merely rumored.

I realize as Kate stands in her doorway each morning watching her dress for school that as our little girl moves ever steadily into her own world, so goes her room. And I'm so glad that I insisted on changing the blue plaid wallpaper to those fields of pink flowers for her — even if you can't see them.

Hints aid repair of ball faucets

By Al Schneider
Central Hardware

Many kitchens and baths have rotating-ball-type faucets. Although normally reliable, sometimes these units come out of adjustment or develop leaks. I have a few tips to help you make repairs with ease.

These faucets are single-handed units that use a ball to control the inlet of hot and cold water.

Handle leaks on this variety generally are caused by improper adjustment. They are quick and easy to reset. For spigot leaks, I usually suspect the spring-loaded seat assembly. The assembly parts are easy to install and come in inexpensive kits. I recommend replacing all parts at the time of repair to avoid the need for future replacement of partially worn parts. For ball-type faucets, you will need a spanner or hex wrench, usually supplied in the repair kit you select.

For simple adjustments, there is no need to shut off the water. I simply loosen the handle set screw and slide the handle from the stem. If the faucet has been leaking from the handle, I use a hex wrench from the kit to tighten the adjusting collar by turning it clockwise. It should be turned far enough to remove the leak completely. If too tight, the faucet handle will be hard to move. If too loose, it will leak.

If the adjusting ring cannot be turned or is corroded, the repair will be a little more involved. Begin by turning off the water to the faucet at the shut-off valve.

If you need help in diagnosing or completing a faucet repair, call me at Central Hardware's Mr. Tinker Hotline, (314) 946-3000. I'd be happy to help.

As leaves begin to fall, we anticipate the return of crisp autumn evenings, holiday gatherings, football Sundays ... and home heating bills.

Nationwide, according to the U.S. Department of Energy, more energy is used to heat apartments and houses than for any other purpose. Space heating accounts for nearly 50 percent of energy consumed in a typical household, while water heating uses another 15 percent.

Most of this energy still comes, directly or indirectly, from fossil fuels: oil, natural gas or coal. These are non-renewable resources which could be exhausted someday unless we take measures to use them wisely while new energy sources are being developed.

Reducing our energy use can also cut our energy costs without affecting our home comfort levels. Many energy conservation steps are very simple and cost little if anything to implement.

Renters and homeowners alike can begin conserving energy by adjusting the temperature settings on their thermostats. During the day, set the thermostat at 65 degrees to 68 degrees and lower it to about 60 degrees at night. A 10-degree nighttime setback can save you 10 to 25 percent on your heating bill (5 to 15 percent if you have a heat pump). Some older people or individuals caring for infants may want to consult with their doctors regarding their special heating requirements.

In cooler indoor temperatures, warm clothing can keep you comfortable by retaining your natural body heat. Closely woven fabrics add at least a half degree of warmth, and long-sleeved sweaters add 2 to 4 degrees of warmth, depending on their weight. Slacks are at least a degree warmer than skirts.

Afghans and coverlets are perfect for curling up with a good book — or a friend. Before starting up your furnace on these chilly evenings, consider throwing an extra blanket on the bed or lighting the fireplace.

While a glowing fire can warm your spirits, your fireplace may be an energy waster. A glass screen will reduce the loss of warmed air through the chimney. Be sure the damper is closed when the fireplace is not in use, and if there is still a gap between the fireplace and closed damper, stuff the gap with insulation or cover the opening with a board (remove before you use the fireplace).

When you do turn on your furnace, be sure to change the filters regularly if you have a forced-air system and check the ductwork for leaks, which can be repaired with duct tape or caulking. If you have radiators, dust or vacuum them often. Dust and grime impede the flow of heat. Close doors to unused rooms and shut their heating vents.

Doors and windows are notorious heat thieves. During the day, open the drapes and shades on "Doors and windows aren't the only places warmed air escapes and cold air enters. Nearly 80 percent of infiltration takes place at baseboards; through wall outlets; through holes around exhaust fans and dryer vents; and through holes where plumbing pipes or telephone wires enter the house."

Windows which receive direct, warming sunlight, but be sure to close them at night. Keep north-facing drapes or blinds drawn at all times. Move a lit candle around the framing of your windows and doors. If the flame blows around, you should consider caulking or weatherstripping. Materials are available at your local hardware store. You will spend only about $25 to $30 to caulk and weatherstrip your entire house, but you will save about 10 percent in your annual energy bill.

Doors and windows aren't the only places warmed air escapes and cold air enters. Nearly 80 percent of infiltration takes place at baseboards; through wall outlets; through holes around exhaust fans and dryer vents; and through holes where plumbing pipes, telephone wires and drain pipes enter or exit the house. These gaps should all be caulked or stuffed with insulation.

If you own your home, insulating the attic and perhaps the exterior walls are more expensive energy conserving measures, but they are well worth the investment, and can save you as much as 20 to 30 percent your utility bills if you have no insulation at present. Before purchasing insulation, consult with your hardware dealer or a reputable insulation dealer. Find out what R-value or number your home should have.

R-values are insulation efficiency ratings. The "R" stands for resistance to winter heat loss (or summer heat gain). The higher the R-number, the more effective the insulating ability. In Illinois, the Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources (ENR) recommends attic insulation with an R-value of 30 and sidewall insulation (this is usually a loose material blown into the space between exterior and interior walls in existing buildings) of at least R-11 to R-15.

Today's homeowner frequently looks for any method to reduce his heating costs, which account for nearly 50 percent of the energy used in the typical household. The more obvious choices of sealing leaks or adding insulation are considered first and may indeed make a large dent in the average fuel bill. However, many homeowners should consider an investment in a replacement or modification of their heating system.

If you would like more tips on saving energy in your home, ENR has several free publications which will be of interest. "Low-Cost No-Cost: Energy Savers" offers several easy and inexpensive tips on saving energy throughout the year. "More for Your Money ... Home Energy Savings," written specifically for the Illinois homeowner, explains in detail how you can achieve energy savings around your home, and how to purchase more energy-efficient appliances. These and several other conservation titles can be ordered from ENR's Information Clearinghouse by calling (800) 252-8855.

One person's junk becomes another's replacement part

By Peter Bohr

Would you believe it happened on my maiden drive in the car? I had just handed over a significant sum of cash to buy a vintage Jaguar E-type sports car, resplendent in gleaming chrome trim and perfect "Robin's egg blue" paint. And then on the way home, on the freeway, a foot-long piece of that beautiful chrome trim worked itself loose from around the windshield and flew off the car. With a sickening WHAP, it nicked the Jaguar's roof before landing somewhere down the embankment.

The next day, when I found out the price of a new trim piece, it seemed my wallet would end up as badly gouged as the Jag's paint. And that's when I discovered the joys of the junkyard.

I learned of a local fellow who "parted out" old British cars. He had a building full of bits and pieces, all neatly organized, carefully taken from dozens of wrecked or dilapidated cars he had bought over the years. And yes, he had just the part I needed — and for less than half the price of a new one.

Of course it was used, and a little tarnished. But when I polished it up, it looked to be in pretty much the same condition as the rest of the chrome on the Jag. In fact, it was a perfect match.

"If you've never dealt with an auto dismantler before — and most people haven't — don't be put off," writes Michael Lamm in the October issue of Road & Track. "Greasy counters and chained Dobermans are mostly relics of the past. Modern wrecking yards tend to be neat, organized and businesslike."

The wrecking yard's primary virtue is price. As a general rule, a wrecking yard part should cost a quarter or maybe a half of what you'd pay for a new one, Lamm says.

But there's another advantage: availability. Brand-new parts for older cars in particular are often not available at any price. So your only hope is to auto dismantle. And with newer cars, parts like trim pieces are often back-ordered by dealers for weeks even though they're still cataloged by the automaker. There's yet another advantage of shopping the auto junkyard. You often will be able to buy a part that's more complete than it would be new, despite its low price. "Suppose you need a door for your Porsche 944," Lamm says. "The Porsche dealer wants $1,035 for a new one, which is essentially an empty shell without the window glass, window regulator, weatherstripping, trim, latch or lock. The dismantler charges up to $500 and tosses in all those extras."

For listings of yards, look in the "Yellow Pages" under "Automobile Wrecking." In many cities, some yards specialize in imports, others in domestic cars. Still others may specialize further, in British cars, for example, or in a single make of car. Make calls to find out what they handle if you are in doubt. You may also find classified ads in your newspaper for local yards or for individuals parting out a single car. Automotive swap meets are still another source of used parts.

If you can't find a local source for the part you need, check the classified ads in national publications like Road & Track or Hemmings Motor News, available at newsstands. Lamm warns that certain categories of used parts should not be purchased sight unseen, including many electrical items and high-wear items like water pumps and carburetors. If possible, try to bring your old parts along so you can make the right match. With some items, yards may want to keep your old part as a "rebuildable core," and will charge extra if you do not provide it.

You should, of course, always check with a dealer or an auto parts store to see what a new part would cost before you visit your local junkyard. On rare occasions, I've found that for one reason or another a new part is actually cheaper than a used one.

But the point to remember is that one person's junk may be another person's valuable replacement part.

Interior spaciousness built into midsize Hyundai Sonata

Hyundai has introduced the new 1990 V6 Sonata, a roomy, midsize automobile.

In addition to interior spaciousness and comfort, Sonata features an optional multipoint electronically fuel-injected, 3.0-liter V6 engine. It delivers 142 horsepower and 168 foot-pounds of torque at 2500 rpm for strong off-the-line acceleration.

Other highlights include: power/normal shift mode selector on the automatic transmission, luxurious interior leather package, new GLS grille, bronze-tint glass and new premium Hyundai/Polk Audio System with compact disc.

Sonata's streamlined body is efficient as well as stylish, allowing the new car to slice through the air with a drag coefficient of only 0.34. That car's sleek shape results in improved fuel economy, driving stability and low wind noise. Aerodynamic features are also helped by aircraft-styled doors with triple seals.

The new 3.0-liter V6 engine comes with a larger 17.2-gallon fuel tank, a heavy-duty battery and alternator, and wider P195/70R-14 tires.

It also comes with a standard four-speed electronically controlled automatic overdrive transmission. This feature gives the driver the option of selecting one of two transmission shift modes—"power" for maximum performance and quick downshifts, and "normal" for optimum economy.

For those who prefer the multipoint electronically fuel-injected 2.6-liter four-cylinder powerplant, Hyundai offers a choice of either five-speed manual overdrive transmission or the optional four-speed electronically controlled automatic overdrive with lock-up torque converter. It delivers 116 horsepower and 138 ft.-lbs. of torque.

Sonata's long list of standard features includes: a digital quartz clock, tachometer, trip odometer, front door map pockets, full door trim with cloth inserts, full cloth seat trim, a tilt-steering column, full wheel covers and semiconcealed variable intermittent windshield wipers/washers.

Technical features include rack-and-pinion steering, power-assisted ventilated front-disc brakes and power-assist dual diagonal braking system, and self-adjusting rear drum brakes. Sonata's independent front suspension features MacPherson struts with coil springs; the independent trailing arm rear suspension has a three-link torsion axle with coil springs. Sonata's ride qualities are further enhanced with front and rear stabilizer bars, which help keep the car firmly anchored to the road.

The front doors open wide to facilitate easy entry and exit. The trunk has a rear deck lid that opens to a nearly vertical position, putting it well out of the way for easy loading. The trunk opening extends down to bumper level, providing a lift-over height of only 29 inches.

While the Sonata is already generously equipped, the Sonata GLS provides even more comfort, luxury and convenience.

The GLS version features cruise control, an exciting new grille, plush full-cloth seat trim, a six-way adjustable driver's seat, 60/40 split fold-down rear seatbacks, an AM/FM stereo cassette with six speakers, power windows and door locks, power rear-view mirrors, automatic power antenna, front and rear armrest storage compartments, deluxe full wheel covers, bright accent trim, front door courtesy lamps, an under-seat storage tray, seatback map pockets and an illuminated vanity mirror. The instrumentation includes a voltmeter and an oil pressure gauge.

For superior audio performance, the Premium Hyundai/Polk Audio system offers a compact disc player, AM/FM stereo cassette, a 160-watt amp and 12 Polk Audio component speakers. The system uses Polk's patented SDA Crossover Matrix for three-dimensional sound. All are specially designed for Sonata.

Good windshield wipers essential to drive safely

One way to avoid accidents is to have a clear view of the road ahead, and that's possible only if your wipers can keep the windshield clean.

If the wiper streaks the windshield instead of cleaning it, then the rubber strip likely is cracked and brittle or it is not being pushed against the windshield with enough force. Check the wiper-arm tension by lifting the wiper blade away from the windshield and then letting it return to its own.

If it snaps back with all edges of the rubber wiping blade contacting the windshield, then undoubtedly you have enough tension. If there is not enough tension or uniform contact, you may have to change the entire wiper arm.

On occasion the blade refill may slip off its holders and the metal blade assembly will touch the glass. That is what causes the screeching sound, reminiscent of chalk scraping on a blackboard.

If that happens, and the glass becomes scratched, there are glass rubbing compounds — some people even use toothpaste and elbow grease — to make the glass clear again. If that's too much work, new glass repair outfits — the ones that advertise that you do not have to replace the windshield for scratches and holes that may only need repairing — can do it for you.

Changing the blades at the first sign of deterioration will prevent damage to the windshield, and it is a job for the home mechanic.

The straight end connector has three options for removing the lock clip. The first one involves lifting up the area where the wiper blade assembly joins the arm. Use your thumb to pull the latch down, being careful not to drive the spring clip under your thumbnail. Once the latch is free, then pull the wiper blade assembly off the arm. The other straight end variations include using a screwdriver to lift up a clip on top of the connector or pushing in a similar clip on the bottom of the connector.

McNary faces Judiciary Committee

By Sabrina Eaton
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate is virtually certain to confirm St. Louis County Executive Gene McNary as commissioner of the troubled U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, lawmakers said last week after a 3-hour hearing before the senate's Judiciary Committee.

Ethnic organizations who worry that McNary lacks immigration experience and sensitivity to minorities were resigned to his getting the job and expressed hope he would work with them to resolve problems at the agency.

The Judiciary Committee is scheduled to vote Oct. 17 on McNary's appointment, with testimony by the full Senate later that week, Senate aides said.

The Justice Department hopes to have McNary in office by Nov. 1, said legislative affairs specialist John Mackey.

"My impression is that he has sufficient votes on the committee and on the floor," said Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, chairman of the Subcommittee on Immigration and Refugee Affairs. "He responded to some concerns and questions about sensitivity to the poor and underprivileged, and demonstrated a willingness to listen and learn. He made a positive impression today."

Barring unforeseen circumstances, Illinois Democrat Paul Simon, another immigration subcommittee member, said he would vote for McNary.

"I think he performed respectably and didn't pretend to be an expert on things he didn't know about," Simon said as he left the committee chambers. "I think he'll get the approval of the Senate."

McNary was introduced to the committee by Missouri Republican Sens. John C. Danforth and Christopher S. "Kit" Bond, and House Majority Leader Richard A. Gephardt, D-south St. Louis. All gave him glowing endorsements.

Choosing not to deliver an opening statement, McNary parried questions from the committee on his controversial stances on housing, low-income housing and a hospital consolidation plan that critics said transferred indigent care from Clayton to the city.

McNary maintained that local government should determine ways to meet greater needs, and defended the hospital consolidation idea by mentioning that he and Mayor Vincent C. Schoemehl Jr. got an American Medical Association award for the plan.

In response to Simon's request that he show examples of his caring for the less fortunate, McNary pointed to more than two years' service as a public defender in St. Louis. "That's probably more experience with the poor and minorities than most people get in a lifetime," he said.

He offered few glimpses into how he hopes to run the sprawling INS bureaucracy other than agreeing to meet with immigration organizations. Boasting of his administrative skills, McNary mentioned "the need for stronger central control" in the agency.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., described INS as having "very little direction" as well as a morale problem. He pointed to a recent internal Justice Department memo that was "damning." The agency under former Commissioner Alan Nelson has been accused of mismanagement and enormous backlogs in asylum and legalization applications.

"If everything was smooth in the agency, I don't know if I'd want the job," McNary replied.

During his testimony, McNary told the senators he would make the current crisis of Soviet Jewish refugees a "front-burner item." He added that he hoped to travel to Moscow and Rome to learn about the issue firsthand.

McNary's responsiveness to the local Asian community won approval from the Organization of Chinese Americans, and his background in law-enforcement, and administration won endorsements from the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the Federation for American Immigration Reform.

Only one group—the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC)—actively opposed him, though several other Hispanic organizations expressed reservations about the nomination.

In testimony to the Senate, LULAC political advisor Arnoldo Torres said his group feels McNary might qualify for other appointive posts but lacks the experience with immigration issues and "sensitivity to working with a multi-cultural constituency" the job requires.

"There were no surprises at this hearing and we stand by our position," Torres said afterwards. "It will be interesting to see if he includes us when he meets with other groups, since we opposed his nomination. We have absolutely no doubt he'll get the position—it's a political spoils job."

Added Mario Moreno of the Mexican-American Legal Defense & Educational Fund: "I was impressed with the guy—in the space of that short hearing, he managed to get junkies to Rome and Moscow. We're hoping he'll be accessible and willing to work with us."

McNary would not talk to reporters as he left the committee room.

"I was there, you were there—I don't have any comment," he said testily.

UFO investigator: Aliens may exist

By Michelle Melton
Staff writer

ST. CHARLES — Aliens allegedly have landed in the Soviet Union, if you believe the state-run news agency there.

Go ahead and be skeptical, advises a St. Charles man, but don't be chauvinistic about the potential for strange creatures to visit our planet.

Bruce Widaman of St. Charles is the Missouri president of the Mutual Unidentified Flying Object Network, or MUFON.

Widaman said he is a healthy skeptic when it comes to reports of UFOs. However, he believes it is terrestrial chauvinism to think that we are the only living beings in the universe.

Widaman explained that MUFON is an international organization composed of people seriously interested in the UFO phenomenon.

MUFON, founded in 1969, is not a pack of loonies, Widaman said, adding that it has members and consultants who hold doctorates and master's degrees.

"We scientifically investigate reports and sightings," Widaman said. "And that's how the Russian report will be investigated."

"We are not believers of faith. We deal in fact," he said. "Think about this: The most conservative scientific estimate of the number of planets which are similar to our planet is in the billions."

"A hundred years ago, we didn't have telephones, television, cars, jet engines, or space shuttles. What if one of the billions of planets out there is just 100 years older than ours. Couldn't they then have the capability to fly to Earth?"

Walter Andrus Jr., the international director of MUFON, who lives in Seguin, Texas, said the organization has a member in the Soviet Union who teaches college. The man lives about 70 miles from the reported sighting area in the city of Voronezh, and Andrus has been trying to contact him.

"I know that he is working with the scientists there, and we are waiting for the lab reports of tests done on soil (and) rocks," Andrus said. "Then we'll make our decision about the legitimacy of the reported event."

Considering the evidence, Andrus said, is all MUFON wants the general public to do.

Rural poverty worse than urban poverty says new federal study

By Jason Moody
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — Contrary to the popular stereotype, poverty is not a problem faced predominantly by unemployed inner-city residents.

According to a study released Oct. 11, rural poverty rates among working families are twice as high as in urban areas and most of the rural poor are employed.

In 1987, one-tenth of all rural families with a working head of household lived in poverty, the report, sponsored by a grant from the Ford Foundation, showed.

"It is common to picture the poor as people who should work but do not," said Isaac Shapiro, a senior research analyst at the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities who wrote the report. "Yet large numbers of people do not fit this description," Shapiro said. "In rural America, work provides no assurance that a family will be lifted out of poverty."

This pattern held for every region of the country, according to the report.

For the area that includes Illinois and Missouri, poverty rates among the employed increased by 2.1 and 3.1 percent, respectively, between 1979 and 1987.

"Rural workers were more likely to experience poverty in 1987 than in the late 1970s because of the weakness of the economic recovery in rural areas, where job growth lagged behind that in the urban areas and wages fell," Shapiro said.

The average real earnings of rural workers fell by $228 between 1979 and 1987 while they increased by $1,052 in urban areas, according to the study.

In addition, unemployment rates, lower in rural areas during the 1980s and 1970s, have exceeded the urban rate every year since 1980.

The service and farming sector, which constitute the highest proportion of rural employment, also has experienced the highest poverty rate among the employed.

According to the report, 26.7 percent of families dependent on the service sector and 19 percent of those dependent on the agriculture sector lived below the poverty line in 1987.

The report, based on data from the Census Bureau and the Labor Department, did not include specific figures for southern Illinois.

$100 donated in memory of murdered AIDS volunteer

By Carolyn Schmidt
Staff writer

EAST ST. LOUIS — One hundred dollars has been donated to efforts to promote AIDS awareness in the St. Louis bi-state area in the name of Van Johnson, an East St. Louis AIDS volunteer who was murdered in June.

Johnson was an active volunteer for the Names Project in St. Louis.

The donation was made Thursday by the St. Clair County AIDS task force to the St. Louis branch of a project in which a large memorial quilt was made to commemorate AIDS victims who have died in the United States.

Each time an AIDS victim dies, a panel is added to the quilt to show the magnitude of AIDS deaths nationwide.

"Van was very, very active with helping to make panels for persons who died in the metro area," said Jeanne Harper, chaplain at St. Mary's Hospital in East St. Louis. "Particularly, he was interested in the fact that people who died on the east side died unnoticed."

Harper said Johnson was diligent in making panels for East St. Louis AIDS patients who otherwise might not have been commemorated in the quilt.

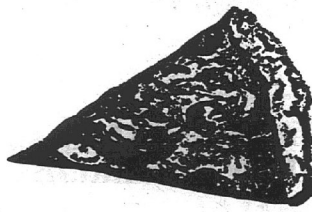

Johnson's sisters, Linda Swanson and Brenda Glinsey, thanked the group for the donation in their brother's memory and expressed appreciation for the Names Project.

"May God continue to bless this task force and may you continue to grow. If I had 1,000 arms, I would like to hug every one of you on behalf of Van," Swanson said.
